Stop dental problems before they start

Did you know going to the dentist in early childhood can prevent many possible dental problems?

Routine care like cleanings, fluoride, and sealants can help prevent decay and keep your teeth healthy. Kids with good oral health miss less school, speak more clearly, and can learn better in class.

Dentists also help teach kids about proper brushing, and how to make good choices about what to eat or drink for a healthy smile.

Set up your child's next dental appointment today!

School-ready smiles

No back-to-school checklist is complete without a visit to the dentist!

Tooth decay is the most common chronic childhood disease in the country. Did you know that each year, children miss 51 million hours of school because of oral health problems?

Reduce the amount of school your child misses by visiting the dentist for regular check-ups. Between visits, encourage your child to brush with fluoride toothpaste twice a day for two minutes each time, and floss daily.
